ABSTRACT

Part 1 of the appendix to "A Model for the Determination of the Costs of Special Education as Compared with That for General Education" contains comprehensive descriptive and statistical information on Ernstville, a hypothetical school district conceived to illustrate the operation of a proposed cost accounting system. Included are sections on student enrollment, staff salaries, physical facilities, and transportation as well as financial and cost accounting data, curricula for various ages and handicapping conditions, and the use of 10-minute units of service measure.

THE COMMUNITY

APPENDIX

Section I

In order to illustrate the operation of the cost accounting system, a hypothetical community and school district were designed. This section summarizes the demographic and socioeconomic characteristics, and provides a map illustrating the hypothetical community of Ernstville, which was discussed in Section XII of the report.

SECTION II

ERNSTVILLE SCHOOL DISTRICT

Section II

Section II as a whole illustrates many of the characteristics of the hypothetical Ernstville School District. Section II-A highlights the enrollment by grade, by type of handicap and by geographic area. It indicates three basic types of special education instruction: itinerant, resource room or self-contained classroom.

Section II-B records the staff employed by the District. The staffing at each school varies depending on the needs of the students in the school. Some of the specialized teachers divide their time among several schools. The District has specified certification and a bachelor's degree as the minimum for classroom employment. Previous experience is not required. The district has a full complement of nonprofessional staff and a group of medical consultants who can be called upon as required.

Section II-C lists the physical facilities of the District and notes the size and usage. Some schools suffer from overcrowding, while others are not filled to capacity, but the intent is to have each student attending a neighborhood school if possible.

Section II-D illustrates the available transportation. The District provides all its transportation on an annually contracted basis. It does not own any vehicle nor employ any drivers. The District provides transportation for any student who lives more than three-fourths of a mile from his school and for some special education students. Those whose disability does not require transporting and who attend their neighborhood school are expected to walk to school. The District also provides transportation for special activities such as athletic events, school picnics and field trips.

The Ernstville School District provides lunchroom facilities in each of its schools, and hot lunches for students who wish to purchase their lunch. Students who meet financial need requirements, are provided hot lunches. Students who bring their lunch to school may purchase milk. The lunch scheduling policy is left to each of the schools. Section II-E illustrates an average distribution of the students for lunch purposes.

The concept of the EESEU was described in Section VI of the body of this report. Appendix Section II-F shows the numbers of EESEU's that are offered in the Ernstville Schools. The number of special education students a teacher can instruct is dictated by state regulations and is not left to the discretion of the District. However, the Ernstville School District did subjectively select 30 students as the optimum a teacher in its regular education program could handle, and 4 as the number a speech teacher should instruct at one time.

SECTION III
FINANCIAL AND
COST ACCOUNTING
DATA

SECTION III

Section V includes a number of the financial and cost accounting statements generated for the Ernstville School District. Included among these statements are the worksheets used in the computation of the ESEU rates for the curricula for which costs have been computed. Also included are the registers used to record actual performance during the year. Additionally, there are statements which calculate the costs earned and analyze the variances existing between the planned costs and the actual expense. Registers for each class or program, similar to those shown, are summed to calculate cost information for the school and for the District.

SECTION IV
CURRICULA

Section IV - Curricula

Of the 5,116 students attending school in the Ernstville School District, 12 have been randomly selected, and their curricula have been described in detail in this section. A student's curriculum describes how much time he spends in each of various activities throughout the school year. It includes both the instructional and noninstructional activities in which a student is engaged during the school day. The curriculum is developed primarily through the use of the daily class schedule with adjustments made for special activities, such as school programs and field trips that occur periodically throughout the school year, and includes the addition of transportation and evening programs.

In the following schedules, two commonly used terms are "Recess," a time allowed a student to get up and stretch, and use the washroom, and "Traffic" which refers to time allowed for a student to move from one classroom to another. These generally nonproductive but necessary activities are referred to as "holding" activities. Other noninstructional activities which provide a beneficial service to students are grouped under the heading of "service" activities.

The curricula are designed individually for a student, so that he receives the proper mix of educational activities to meet his needs. For example, allowance has been made for both the grade 8 and TMH students described in this section to receive itinerant speech instruction, although all the students in their classes do not receive this instruction. It is likely, however, that most students in the same classroom receive approximately the same program of instruction.

Curricula designed in this manner facilitate the development of individual programs for special education students. As indicated in these schedules, the Ernstville School District desires to mainstream its special education students into the regular classroom as much as possible. For example, the EMH student whose program is described in section G spends all of his time in the self-contained classroom, while his classmate described in section F spends part of his day in the regular classroom.

The following schedules sample students curricula in a number of programs, a number of age groups and a number of schools.

SECTION V

EESEU's

SECTION V

Section IV includes packets of EESEU's for each of the student curricula that appear in Section III. The items listed on the EESEU indicate the necessary requirements for delivering that unit of education. For three of these packets, all components of the EESEU cost have been calculated. The notation "See attached" on these EESEU's refers to materials on the accompanying lists of textbooks, consumables and equipment. The equipment and supplies are generally listed separately because corresponding cost information is required for the development of the secondary rates. Worksheets demonstrating the calculation of all these rates are included in Section V of the Appendix. On the remaining packets of EESEU's, all requirements except the details of "Equipment and Supplies" are listed.
